Conventioneers,

The host hotel, the DoubleTree Hotel in Greentree, PA has 460 rooms. They are not blocking any for us. Instead they are releasing rooms as needed with no limit. If we take up the whole hotel so be it. As of today there are 167 rooms reserved. With that said, sometimes they are slow to release more rooms for our convention. This is at the corporate level, not the people in Greentree. We have run into this unfortunately before, but gets cleared up rather quickly. Usually a day or two. Hilton corporate says they will not take reservations if you call the front desk, the computer will show that there is no convention at all. That is why if you don't reserve online at www.corvairpittsburgh.com, or call there reservation line, 1-800-222-TREE (8733) and use code CCA, there may be an issue. If any other requests or problems exist please e-mail, call, or fill out the contact information on the website and I will surely get back to you.

Thank you,

EM Emerges Submitted by Joe Darinsig (Taken from Flat Six Journal Mid Continent Corvair Association Newsletter)

William Smith traded his Yellow EM coupe for a VW Bug and he had purchased a '68 500 coupe from Terry Kalp, but he still yearned for an EM Corvair. On a visit to the Kalp Shop he found a complete '61 700 four-door under a pile of parts in the lean-to. Soon a deal was made.

The next step was to bring the sedan out into the sunlight and clean the years of dirt and leaves off. William picked a warm day in December and after installing a rear axle and a couple of wheels that held air was ready to move the Corvair that had been idle for a couple of decades. With help from Terry Kalp, Greg Renfro and a come-a-long, the sedan began to move.

A few gallons of water and some scrubbing resulted in a much cleaner and better looking Corvair. A step closer to hitting the road.

Before cleaning.

After cleaning decades of leaves and other debris from under the top engine shroud.

Not much evidence of mouse damage was found while cleaning. Perhaps this shed skin from a rather large snake might provide one explanation.

Greg Renfro records the before condition of the barn find sedan that had not seen sunlight this Century.

Unlike last months newsletter I hope there are no snow pictures on the front page. I just attended Spring Carlisle, it was rainy, cold, windy and the calendar said April 19th! I am not understanding this.

Keep in mind the open house at the Corvair Ranch is only held every other year and it is this year. It is being held on Sunday, May 20th, there was an article about it in last months newsletter. Let's have a good turn out of CPCC members. There will be a short meeting at 1pm since we are not having a regular monthly meeting. Jeff usually gets things started around 2pm. I was at Jeff's to get a few things for my car so everything is ready for the cruising season. Everything for the open house seems well underway. Our club took care of obtaining a certificate of insurance from CORSA to satisfy the township since Jeff uses their land to accommodate non Corvair parking.

I was at Norm's house on April 14th to take a few pictures of Norm's car and get additional information on the car. Information and pictures will be in this newsletter. If interested please contact me and I will give you the information to contact Norm's daughter.

Anyone planning to attend the Orphan Car Tour on June 2nd don't forget to sign up. Information for the website was in last newsletter. I'm sure if you have never been on this tour John Johnson would be glad to fill you in.

Why Isn't the 1960-69 Chevrolet Corvair

Worth More? by Paul Duchene

Published on Hagerty.com dated March 26, 2018

Submitted by Joe Darinsig

Depending on your point of view, the Chevrolet Corvair was either one of the most creative or most foolhardy steps in the history of the U.S. auto industry. It was designed to combat the Volkswagen Beetle and adapted the air-cooled, rear-engine concept to American scale and style.

Its handling was no worse than the Beetle, but ambitious politician Ralph Nader exploited it for his own ends. In 1971 the National Highway Safety Transportation Board declared the Corvair as safe as any car in the early 1960s, but it was too late to matter.

Still, with 1,839,439 sold over 10 years, including 130,362 trucks, the Corvair was hardly a failure. It's among the least expensive ways into the U.S. collector car world and the best convertibles seldom surpass $25,000. Corvairs are relatively easy to fix, with a reliable parts supply. Survivors are common outside the Rust Belt.

So why aren't they worth more?

First a compact history: Chief engineer Ed Cole aimed the Corvair (combining Corvette and Bel Air) at the Beetle in 1956. During development, the sedan was camouflaged as a 15-foot, six-passenger Australian Holden, with a rear-mounted, 140-cubic-inch, air-cooled flat-six-cylinder engine, and GM's first fully independent suspension. Corvair production began on July 7, 1959 and it was Motor Trend's 1960 Car Of The Year.

Initial models were 500 and 700 4-door sedans, followed by a Monza coupe in April 1960, a four-speed option for 1961, and turbocharging in 1962. Target price was $2,000, but heater, radio and a Powerglide transmission added up to $2258 plus shipping—only $341 less than a full-size Impala coupe. Claimed mileage was 26 mph highway, but a gas-powered heater reduced that, and a forced air heater was offered in 1961.

A Corvan, Greenbrier passenger van, Lakewood station wagon and Rampside pickup arrived in 1961; convertible and Spyder packages in April 1962.

Turbocharging bumped horsepower to 150 and opened up a sporty market in 1962, but the April 1964 Mustang launch rendered that short-lived. Even a 1965 Corvette-influenced redesign with improved rear suspension couldn't halt the pony cars, and sales dwindled until the final year of 1969.

The Corvair lost its driving force in 1961 when Ed Cole was "kicked upstairs" to head the GM car and truck group. Despite Corvair-based concept cars like the Sebring Spyder, Monza GT, Astro 1, and John Fitch's Phoenix, resources were redirected to conventional models.

Larry Claypool is a lifelong Corvair aficionado and technical editor for the national club magazine for 25 years. He ran a Corvair repair shop in Frankfort, Illinois for 42 years, and points out that a several factors conspired against the Corvair's acceptance.

"It's still a niche vehicle, not a mainstream Chevy," he said. "There were lots of them, but it's unconventional, with an air-cooled rear engine and limited performance potential. Even turbocharged, the hottest stock Corvair performed like a base V-8 of the day."

Claypool noted that once Cole was gone, the Corvair was an orphan. "Most dealers might have one junior mechanic who worked on them. If he was off, they'd tell you to schedule an appointment later."

As an economy car, many were not well-maintained, he said. Spares were common through the 1980s—even at dealers—but body parts have dried up. Door, trunks and hoods can be found, but everything else is welded together, making replacement pretty expensive.

While mechanical parts are available, a Corvair owner needs to know “the guy” nearby who can work on his/her car—or be handy themselves. “There are a lot of hands-on owners, but probably only a dozen Corvair specialists in the country.” With prices low there’s little incentive to specialize. “In most places it’s easier to get a Ferrari correctly repaired,” he said.

Partly due to low values, numerous barn finds survive, and are easy to revive in rust-free zones. Running coupes and sedans can be found under $1,500, but don’t expect any investment appreciation. Convertibles can be found for $12,000-$15,000, but rusty projects may be uneconomical to fix.

Claypool believes the 1965-66 Corsa coupe and convertible have the brightest future. They offered 140 hp with four carburetors (tricky to set up), while turbocharging delivered 180 hp, but the engine is happiest over 3000 rpm. Bill Mitchell’s redesign was Corvette-like, and only 27,621 hardtops and 11,495 convertibles were built.
