V-P Ramblings

Submitted by John Johnson

Like many of you I am beginning to suffer from "cabin fever". I do get out some, but only for gas, groceries, pet food and bird seed. I go out for gas more for my mowers than my cars. I have Erie car insurance and contacted my agent about a partial refund, like the other companies were doing. She told me that Erie was discussing such a move and they would send me a letter. I reminded her that Farmers and Allstate were talking 25%. You may want to check with your agent about possible discounts. Just when the "fever" was becoming too much, my June, 2020 Hemmings Classic Car arrived in my mailbox. There is a whole section devoted to Chevys. The first article I came across was written by Executive Editor, Richard Lentinello. In it he talked about Chevrolets and devoted a paragraph to the Corvaire. He had nothing but praise for the car and included a picture of a late red coupe, the only picture in his article. I wondered if Lou sent it in. Continuing through the magazine, I came across a section about Chevy convertibles written by Jeff Koch. Jeff had nothing but praise for our cars. He mentioned Corvairs in the '62, '64, '65, '66 and '69 sections. He then pictured a '64 convertible and either a '65 or '66 convertible. He then followed with a companion article about station wagons.

Replacing pushrod tube O-rings ! Overhauling an engine ? This would be a good time to make sure the insides of those pushrod tubes are clean and shiny. Did you know that a 12 gauge shotgun brush is just the right size to scrub out those tubes ? Just add some carburetor cleaner and scrub away. And if you don't already have the appropriate shotgun cleaning brush handy, consider buying a "Universal Gun Cleaning Kit"; they typically have brushes ranging from 0.177" up to 12 gauge so you can use them to clean oil galleries and other passages in the engine.

American Dream: The Corvair's Rise and Fall

Submitted by Joe Darinsig

Corvair production may have been limited to the 1960s, but during that decade Chevy released a dizzying number of variants. The Corvair made its debut for 1960, and buyers could choose from a coupe or a sedan in two trim levels: 500 (plain) or 700 (a little less plain). Later in the year, the sportier 900 Monza coupe joined the lineup—call that one a sign of things to come.

While the Corvair is now typically viewed as a performance car, at the time it was GM's answer to the recent influx of imports from the likes of Volkswagen and NSU. The Corvair's lineup quickly grew, and in 1961 it gained the Lakewood station wagon as well as the forward-control utility vehicles: the Rampside pickup, a panel van, and a Greenbrier passenger van.

Big news came for 1962: turbo power for the Monza Spyder. At the time, the only other turbocharged car offered was the Oldsmobile F85 Jetfire—and it beat the Corvair to market by just a few weeks.

The Corvair family got a big redesign for 1965: sleeker bodies, redesigned suspension and a trimmed-down lineup that shed the vans, trucks and pickups. The Yenko Stinger and Fitch Sprint showed these cars' true potential, but the writing was on the wall: The Corvair's days were numbered, and GM started to limit development and advertising dollars. Sales dropped from nearly a quarter of a million in 1965 to a little more than 27,000 in 1967. Just 6000 Corvairs were sold for 1969, the model's last year of production.

Did Ralph Nader's "Unsafe at Any Speed: The Designed-In Dangers of the American Automobile" really kill the Corvair? While the 1965 book definitely didn't paint a flattering picture of the early Corvair's rear swing axle, the car also faced increased competition—from other brands as well as in its own showroom.

If the release of the Dodge Dart and Ford Falcon weren't enough, Chevy itself provided a tempting alternative to the Corvair. For about the same price, consumers could pick up the more conventional Chevy II Nova. In 1967, for example, the Corvair Monza cost more than the V8-powered Nova. And thanks to the day's low gas prices, Chevy's big sellers of the time were their mid- and full-sized cars, like the Malibu and Impala.

The Corvair's history prompts some intriguing speculation. What if Nader's book never damned the brand? What if the 1973 gas crisis arrived a decade earlier? Perhaps the Corvair nameplate would still be with us today. Who knows, the Corvair could have been the one that fended off the sophisticated, efficient European and Asian cars that have populated the automotive landscape for the past 40 years. We can always dream, right?

FROM TOP: The first-generation Corvair was available in sedan, coupe (shown) or convertible form. Alternate body styles included the Greenbrier van and the Rampside pickup (shown). LEFT AND BELOW: The second-generation car was swoopy on the outside and had a more advanced suspension. Corvairs fared well in road racing, and many are still on the vintage racing circuit.

Guess what, a picture and write up about the Lakewood. He did use an advertisement put out by Chevy, but that's OK, we still got our mention! Corvairs are often mentioned in the magazine and always in a positive light. People in that organization like us and appreciates the special classic we have.

One more thing I need to discuss. JOHN and I talked about upcoming Club meetings and activities. With the stay-at-home order from the Governor and the fact that other organizations are moving all events to June or July, we thought it best to cancel all our meeting and activities through June. That means our next scheduled event will be the picnic at JOHN's on July 18th, and even that date may have to be altered, but let's hope not.

These are difficult times we are going through and not much hope in sight, until we have a vaccine available. The most valuable part of this Club is You, the members. Our first priority is to keep everyone safe.

Take care my friends. Remember: THIS TOO SHALL PASS.

Message from Joe

As we all are going through the coronavirus issue by staying at home or necessary trips to the grocery store, or other places. Just a few items Linda and I are doing to offset the boredom issues. She has finished three 1,000 piece puzzles already. I have spent too many days outside with yard work, hedge and tree trimming. I have been inventorying a lot of my Corvairst items: pictures, magazines, toys, painting, etc. We're just waiting to get back to a supposedly normal life, which probably will have the virus practices going on for some time.

I am building a Corvairst model replica of my Yenka Stinger. That's worse than doing a real car. I'm waiting for the next Corvairst meeting to discuss the club's trophies choices and the Corvairst Day Show, which hopefully will go on!

Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) - Reminders

As guidance is updated, ACL will post or link to it on this page and share it through the ACL Updates email service. If you need help finding services in your community, the Eldercare Locator can help. Visit <https://eldercare.acl.gov/> or call 1-800-677-1116. People who are 65 or older are more likely to have serious COVID-19 illness. This may be because immune systems change with age, making it harder to fight off diseases and infection. Older adults also are more likely to have underlying health conditions that make it harder to cope with and recover from illness. In addition, people of any age who live in a nursing home or long-term care facility are at higher risk.

Other people who may be at higher risk for getting very sick from COVID-19, regardless of age or disability, include:

- *People with chronic lung disease or moderate-to-severe asthma
- *People who have serious heart conditions
- \*People with severe obesity (body mass index [BMI]  $\geq 40$ )
- *People with diabetes
- *People with chronic kidney disease undergoing dialysis
- *People with liver disease
- *People who are immunocompromised. People who are undergoing cancer treatment, smoking, bone marrow or organ transplantation, immune deficiencies, poorly controlled HIV or AIDS, and prolonged use of corticosteroids and other immune weakening medications including people receiving cancer treatment. Reducing exposure is especially important for people at higher risk of complications!
